

Annual Report 2009

WORLD ACCORD

President's Message

In this past year World Accord began navigating a critical transition process unlike anything it has experienced before. Two years ago, founding Executive Director, Terry Fielder, asked the World Accord Board of Directors to begin preparing for his retirement, which he publicly announced in February 2009. The Board invested several hundred hours in the ensuing search process: defining World Accord's needs and criteria; reviewing more than 60 applicants; interviewing candidates from Canada, Asia and Africa; assessing candidates against the needs and criteria; and finally making the decision to appoint David Barth as Executive Director, effective July 2009.

David brings experience, skills and passion to this leadership role in World Accord. His engineering and MBA degrees, his experience as a consultant, teacher, and entrepreneur all complement his ten years of working at World Accord. David's business interests and expertise, fund raising skills and contacts, and relationships with our Partners were all key factors in his selection.

World Accord moves on. New challenges await us. New staff members bring new perspectives and see new opportunities. Through all these changes our commitment to working through Partners remains. Continually improving how we support our Partners and forge relationships with a broader base of donors is still our first priority. We thank our Partners for sharing their lives with us and thank you, our donors, for supporting us in the work that we do alongside our Partners. You are making an incredible difference in the lives of many people!

Sincerely,

Steve Capling, President of World Accord

Executive Director's Message

Ah retirement! I can't believe it's here already. It seems like just yesterday I took my first trip to Haiti. As I look back over the past 25 years, I am filled with mixed emotions but mostly I am proud. Proud of the accomplishments of our partners as they helped many thousands of people in their respective communities raise themselves from abject poverty to live productive and hopeful lives. I am proud of the many volunteers it takes to do this kind of work and proud of the supporters who have held steadfastly to their belief in World Accord, our approach and our partners in the field.

Over the years, I have seen tremendous progress made where World Accord has been active over longer periods of time. In the early years it was a chore just to visit our partners, PRR, in Honduras. We had to hike for several hours carrying our bags in the tropical heat to reach La Buena Fe. There was no road from the highway connecting the major cities of Tegucigalpa and San Pedro Sula. There were no schools. All the homes had thatched roofs and were made of sticks and stones, plastered with mud. Water was carried from some distance away and there were no latrines in the villages. People lived in a way that was similar to how we used to go camping in remote areas in my youth. Conditions were certainly unsanitary and the child mortality rate was high (more than 60/1000).

How things have changed! Today the town has roads, electricity, running water, more modern housing and an up-to-date highschool. Child mortality rates are down to less than half the national average of 26/1000.

One has to look further afield to find extreme poverty - so that is what we do. The work carries on and our partners find other communities to assist with their development. We have done so much and yet there is still much to do. The people are changing but the nature and cause of poverty remains. With your help, I am confident World Accord will continue to help change the lives of countless deserving people in the years ahead.

Terry Fielder, World Accord Executive Director

World Accord Construction Expeditions

Construction Expeditions are a volunteer led activity. Participants raise money to travel to one of our project areas in Central America and help local people with a building project. In the process they learn of the issues facing our partners and have the opportunity to develop kinship bonds with many local people. Last year builders raised more than $204,000 to help with construction projects in Honduras and Guatemala. Volunteers Al Wigood, Richard Kirsh and Jens Schoenrank are key to this program.
